PARATWADA DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH

A Guest lecture on English lagunage and communication skills (Session 2021-22)

In Bhagwantrao Shivaji Patil Mahavidyalya Paratwada, the Department of English organizied a guest lecture on English lagunage and communication skills on 4th Jan. 2022. Prin.Dr.R.A Umekar preisied over the funtion. Dr.Sanjiv Ingle, Department of English, C.M Kadhi Mahavidyalaya Achalpur Camp Paratwada was invited as chief guest of the funtion. The chief guest in his speech advocated that communication skills are the abilitieis you use when giving and receiving different types of information. Some examples include communicating new ideas, feelings or even an update on your project. Communication skills involve listening, speaking, observeing and empathising. It is also helpfull to understand the diffrences in how to communicate through face to face interactions, phone converstions and digital Communications like E-mail and Social media.

There are different types of communication skills you can learn and practice to help you become an effective communicator. Many of these skills work together making it important to practice communication skills in different contexts whenever possible. Active listening means paying close attention to the person who is speaking to you. People who are active listeners are well-regarded by their co-workers because of the attention and respect they offer others. While it seems simple, this is a skill that can be hard to develop and improve. You can be an active listener by focusing on the speaker, avoiding distractions like cell phones, laptops or other projects and by preparing questions, comments or ideas to thoughtfully respond. Different styles of communication are appropriate in different situations. To make the best use of your communication skills, it's important to consider your audience and the most effective format to communicate with them. For example, if you are communicating with a potential employer, it's better to send a formal email or call them on the phone. Depending on the situation, you may even need to send a formal, typed letter over other forms of communication. In the workplace, you may find it's easier to communicate complex information in person or via a video conference than in a long, dense E-mail

Friendliness

In friendships, characteristics such as honesty and kindness often foster trust and understanding. The same characteristics are important in workplace relationships. When you're working with others, approach your interactions with a positive attitude, keep an open mind and ask questions to help you understand where they're coming from. Small gestures such as asking someone how they're doing, smiling as they speak or offering praise for work well done can help you foster productive relationships with both colleagues and managers.

Confidence

In the workplace, people are more likely to respond to ideas that are presented with confidence. There are many ways to appear confident such as making eye contact when you're addressing someone, sitting up straight with your shoulders open and preparing ahead of time so your thoughts are polished. You'll find confident communication comes in handy not just on the job but during the job interview process as well

Empathy

Empathy means that you can understand and share the emotions of others. This communication skill is important in both team and one-on-one settings. In both cases, you will need to understand other people's emotions and select an appropriate response. For example, if someone is expressing anger or frustration, empathy can help you acknowledge and diffuse their emotion. At the same time, being able to understand when someone is feeling positive and enthusiastic can help you get support for your ideas and projects.

Respect

A key aspect of respect is knowing when to initiate communication and respond. In a team or group setting, allowing others to speak without interruption is seen as a necessary communication skill. Respectfully communicating also means using your time with someone else wisely—staying on topic, asking clear questions and responding fully to any questions you've been asked.

Imprvement in Communication skills

. With experience and practice, you can learn and improve communication skills. Start by identifying your strengths and then practice and develop those areas.

- Ask a close friend or colleague for constructive criticism: It can be hard to know how you are perceived as a communicator. To get an objective opinion, ask a trusted friend for their honest feedback. Understanding your areas of improvement for communication can help you identify what to focus on.
- Practice improving communication habits: Many communication skills are habits you have developed over time. You can improve those skills by practising new habits that make you a better communicator. That might include being more responsive to communications when they are sent, reminding yourself to make eye contact, practising giving positive feedback and asking questions in conversations.
- Seek opportunities to communicate: Seek opportunities, on and off the job, that require you to use communication skills. This will help you improve existing skills and allow you to practice new ones.

Thus the chief guest at this two hour elaborated speech threw a lime light on various aspects of improving the communication skills among the students. He also gave the key aspects of prepartions for facing intereviews, developing habbits which lead to improving interactive skills. The mob of the students in collage appreciated the speech of the guest. Finally Ku. Shenal Thakre from (B.A final) proposed vote of thanks.
